

Nan-Shan Chang

Address: The Molecular Medicine Institute, National Cheng Kung University (NCKU)

Country: Taiwan

Dr. Nan-Shan Chang is currently the Distinguished Professor of the Molecular Medicine Institute, National Cheng Kung University (NCKU) in Taiwan, and the Adjunct Professor with the SUNY Upstate Medical University and the NYS Institute for Basic Research in Developmental Disabilities, New York. Dr. Chang is most noted for his discovery of tumor suppressor WWOX in 2000. Awards: Breast cancer and neurofibromatosis research awards from the Department of Defense, USA, in 2008 and 2010; Distinguished Professor Award 2010, 2013, 2016 from NCKU; Distinguished Scientist Award 2011 from the Society of Experimental Biology & Medicine, USA.